ABSTRACT

A method of creating an interfaced based representation of an electronic design is provided. Rows and columns are added to tables. These rows and columns represent signals and instances in the electronic design being represented by the description. The cells created by the table that results from the rows and column provide interconnect information.